Pick Normal Site Soon

Supt. Johnson Says Meeting Will Be Held Shortly.

According to dispatches sent out from Lansing, Nov. 28, Thomas E. Johnson, superintendent of public instruction, stated that a meeting of the State Board of Education to choose a site for the Fifth State Normal School would probably be called in ten days.

Although necessary data from a score of cities applying for the school has been available for some time, the board meeting was delayed through illness of Fred A. Jeffers, Painesdale. He will be able to travel next week, Johnson said, and Allan M. Freeland, Grand Rapids, another member, who has been in Florida, is expected to return soon.

Selection of the site by the board is subject to the governor's veto, and he will probably sit with the board when it meets.

The legislative appropriation bill directs that the normal be located north of a line drawn across the state from Muskegon.

Indoor Ball Starts Out With A Bang

On Tuesday night the Indoor League that has been organized for the coming winter started out with four teams playing, the Methodists playing the Presbyterians, and the Holy Name playing the K. P's. Both games very interesting, from the view point of the spectators as well as the players.

The Holy Name and K. P's. played the first game and it was anybody's game up to the last inning, but the K. P's. nosed out ahead, the score being 20-14.

In the second game of the evening, the Methodist Fellowship and Presbyterians battled evenly for five innings but the Presbyterians took a brace in the sixth inning and finally won the game after very hard fighting by the score of 21-13.

Very good sportmanship was displayed by all teams. The crowd seemed very well satisfied with the games and all four teams had a large group of supporters behind them. Due to the fact that Tuesday night is Family Night, or Two for One at the Theatre, the Board of Control thought it best to change the game from Tuesday night to Monday night, so in the future all games will be played on Monday night. All games will start promptly at 7:00 o'clock, and a small charge of five cents will be made to all those wishing to see the game. There will be two games each night.

Next Monday night at 7:00 o'clock, the Masons will play the Firemen in the first game and the Methodists and Holy Name at 8:15 p. m.

Judging from the first nights attendance and the spirit shown by everyone, it looks as though the games this year will go off as good if not better than in previous years. Below will be found the complete schedule for all games for the coming winter.

High School Debate

The next high school debate will be held with Northport on Wednesday evening, Dec. 9th, at Northport.

In case weather conditions demand that a change be made and the debate held here, notices will appear down town next Wednesday.

Watch for announcements.

Ironwood—A searching party is combing the woods in the vicinity of Lake Gogebic in search of Bert and William Jacisin, of Ironwood, brothers, who have been lost since Sunday. They were hunting deer in the vicinity of the lake. The temperature dropped to almost zero last night and it is feared they suffered from exposure to the cold. Neither of the boys is an experienced hunter. They are 18 and 20 years old.

Muskegon—The two masted schooner, Our Son, Capt. F. Nelson commanding, has arrived here after a battle with a storm on Lake Michigan, while two other ships bringing pulp wood for the Central Paper Co. of Muskegon, are still battling their way down the lake. The two ships still out are the Mueller and Zillah, both steamers. They are enroute from Duluth. The arrival of the ships here will close navigation between the northern points and Muskegon

Menominee—The mystery of the disappearance of Eleanor Anderson, of Gwinn, Mich., and Lina Moilainen of White Pine, Mich., was solved when the girls reported that they had been involuntary passengers on an Ann Arbor car ferry over the week end. The girls boarded the car ferry here to sell magazine subscriptions and failed to go ashore before the boat left. They made the trip across the lake to Frankfort and back while Menominee police searched for them.

Lansing—Details of plans suggested to induce new factories to locate here were discussed at a joint meeting of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the Lansing Real Estate board. The real estate board here had been active for some weeks in an endeavor to obtain new factories for the city so that Lansing's industries may be diversified. The chamber of commerce also has investigated a number of factory propositions, but so far no new plants have been obtained by either organization.

The Twelfth Month

High School Beat Independents

Last Friday night at the High School Gym the High School Basket Ball team won a very exciting game from the East Jordan Independents. The Independents being made up of former High School stars thought that they had the game won long before it started but they failed to take into consideration that a team must play as a well oiled machine instead of individual stars. The High School team was working as a unit and displayed remarkable team work for the early season. The Independents played a good individual game but due to lack of practice togefher failed to work together as a unit and superior team work defeated them.

This Friday night Coach Wells team meets the fast Alba quintet and a good game is in store for all those attending. The Big Indoor Junior Fair will be held on the same night starting at 6:00 standard. There will be shows and eats galore and a big Dance after the Basket Ball game. Everyone come.

Below is the score and lineup for the Independent game.

M. S. C. To Broadcast Farm Radio School

Five separate courses, each having its own night of the week, will be included in the farm radio school which is to be broadcast from the Michigan State College, station WKAR, beginning on Monday Jan. 11.

The school will run for twelve weeks or throughout the months of best radio reception. Experience of the college radio school a year ago showed that farmers, as a rule, are too busy with spring work after about April 1 to listen regularly to radio courses. This fact, together with the better reception conditions of the winter months, caused authorities at M. S. C. to book the school earlier this year.

The plan of the courses will be different from that of the first school last spring. Instead of devoting one or two weeks to each subject, individual courses will run through the entire 12 weeks, one night each week being allotted to each. This plan, it is felt, will better serve the needs of both listeners and broadcasters.

Subject matter for the five courses and their nights will be as follows:—home economics, Mondays; animal husbandry, poultry and veterinary medicine, Tuesdays; gardening and horticulture, Wednesdays; and farm crops, Fridays. The lectures will begin at 7:15, eastern standard time, and continue until 8 o'clock. From 2 to 4 speakers will be scheduled for each night.

A radio school catalog, containing detailed schedules of all lectures, the subjects to be discussed, and information about registration, is being mailed out to the hundreds who enrolled in last year's farm school and to others who are interested in agricultural radio courses.

Was Resident Here For Thirty-five Years

Berton Eugene Waterman was born in Stafford, Genessee Co., New York, Sept. 5, 1862. In 1881 he moved with his parents to a farm in Van Buren Co. Michigan, and on June 12, 1889 he was married to Augusta Gertrude Russell of Galesburg, Michigan.

In 1890 they moved to a farm near East Jordan and about two years later they came to East Jordan to live. Here Mr. Waterman was employed in carpenter work for a time and soon built up the business which was known first as the East Jordan Planing Mills Co., and later as the East Jordan Cabinet Co. Some nine years ago he purchased a farm in South Arm township, and for a while divided his attention between the factory and the farm. He finally devoted his entire time to the farm, gradually developing one of the finest stock farms in this part of Michigan.

As a young man he identified himself with the Methodist Church, and has contributed to the church and civic life of East Jordan during his entire residence here.

On Thanksgiving day he complained of not feeling well but undertook to care for his stock as usual. While engaged at this work he was stricken with paralysis and was unconscious until the end came at midnight.

Mr. Waterman is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. C. L. Arnold of Williamsburg, Mich., and Miss Eva Margaret Waterman of East Jordan; two sisters, Mrs. E. C. Paine of Albion, N. Y., and Mrs. Isaac Goldsmith of Bay Shore, Long Island, N. Y. and a brother, John C. Waterman of Holland, Michigan.

Funeral services were held at the farm home Monday afternoon, Nov. 30, 1925, conducted by Rev. Henry Hiles. Interment at Sunset Hill.

Killing The Farmer's Friend

A rural mail carrier shot a hawk on the road the other day and when he went to pick it up, the supposed dead bird took a peck that put out his eye—for which no one can blame the hawk, says the Salem, Oregon, Capital Journal.

The federal employ broke several laws and regulations. It is a violation of the state law to shoot on a public highway. A hawk is one of the most beneficial birds and one of the farmer's best friends, daily destroying its weight in vermin, and as it is useless as food, there is no justification to its slaughter.

As a result of similar wanton slaughter of eagles, hawks and owls, all birds that justify their existence, the balance of nature has been destroyed and a great increase of rabbits, diggers, gophers and mice if causing economic loss to every farmer in the land. All of these birds should be protected by law to prevent their extermination, which is now threatened.

In New York a back alley cat decided to move her family of five kittens across the street. She was so well known that Officer Cudmore stopped all traffic and motor cars while she carried the five kittens safely across. The world pauses sometimes when the American sense of kindness is appealed to.

Judge Stadter of Portland, Oregon, imposed a fine of $500 for cruelty to animals and six months imprisonment, in the case of a man dragging a collie dog to death behind his automobile. Such a sentence will bring him to an undeastanding that even a dumb brute has a right to be killed wihout unnecssary cruelty.

At Pendleton, Chicago and other places where so-called roundups and rodeos are conducted, it is claimed there is no cruelty in the stunt called "bulldogging a steer." Quite the contrary is true. "Bulldogging" steers was never a legitimate part of the cowboy's occupation. It consists of twisting the animals neck, pinning it to the ground and holding it by imbedding the teeth in its lower lip. As a public exhibition it is commercial cruelty, permitted and performed only by those who are indifferent and insensible to animal torture.

Those who advocate kindness to all living creatures, and are praying and working in the great national education campaign against all forms of cruelty to animals, should remember the Human societies in making their wills.

Building a business is not always a cinch. Ask the man who has done it.

Urge Governor To 'Close Gap'

Monster Petition To Finish M-11 Paving Now Under Way.

Governor Alex. J. Groesbeck, State Highway Commissioner, Frank Rogers, and members of the state administrative board are to receive an organized request from westean Michigan within a short time, to complete the paving of M-11 and "close the gap."

Mayor James T. Milliken of Traverse City is chairman of a committee of business men from along M-11 from Muskegon north to Petoskey, which will visit Lansing on behalf of this highway.

M-11, it is generally known, is now a concrete ribbon from the Indiana-Michigan state line to Benzonia. The purpose of this committee will be to present arguments to the state administrative board why this ribbon should be further unwound to reach Mackinaw City. This highway, it is agreed, is the chief feeder for resort and tourist business into Michigan, leading as it does, from the dozen states in the corn belt. Over it the great tide of summer travel flows into the summer play ground of the middle-west. The objects of paving M-11 have increased many fold since the project was first started.

This committee will also present to the state administrative board, the advantages of completing a job already started, believing the best policy is to take one job and finish it before starting another. A few miles here and another few miles there, scattered throughout the state, will not serve to attract the tourists who help pay the state gasoline tax, where one long dustless trip lures them. The paving of M-11 will also treble the business of the state-owned ferries across the Straits of Mackinaw.

Another feature, which will be presented, is the fact that a concrete highway along the scenic shores of Lake Michigan, will bring thousands of people into Michigan, who have started up the Wisconsin shore. Every year tourists start into Wisconsin and Michigan, come to the end of the pavement and turn back. The completion of M-11 would give a loop around Lake Michigan, which tourists would be unable to resist.

These are a few of the sound arguments which the committee will offer when it has an early audience with Governor Groesbeck and the state board.

TO USE MILLIONS IN CORN CRISIS RELIEF

Financing Is Outlined by Bankers and Business Men at Washington.

Washington.—Plans for financing the middle western corn crop on a big scale, including the orderly marketing of that crop and relief for farmers, bankers and business men who are adversely affected by the heavy drop in corn prices were considered at a conference of bankers and business men from Chicago and Iowa. The conference was called by Secretary Jardine.

As a result of the conference there will in all probability be formed a national argricultural credits association such as is contemplated under the intermediate credits act. More than one of these associations, in fact, may be formed.

Such associations would be able under the law to make loans directly to farmers on the security of their crops and to obtain rediscount on the notes from the intermediate credits bank.

The present complaint of the farmers is that the price of corn has slumped so heavily that they are unable to get credit from the commercial banks to enable them to hold their crops until they can get better prices. The heavy slump in corn prices has seriously affected the banking and business situation of some sections of the corn belt.

In Iowa, where corn has been selling at about 50 cents, the farmer has felt the situation severely. If the present plan works out as expected millions of dollars will be made available for quick loans to corn-belt farmers.

Mrs. Rhinelander Poses Before Jury to Show Color

New York.—The two mysterious letters from Leonard Kip Rhinelander to his negroid wife, written before their marriage, were read after an impassioned conflict between attorneys on the two sides. They proved to be every bit as shocking as was expected. They were such that Supreme Court Justice Morschauser ordered all women excluded from the court during the reading.

When both letters had been read and he was asked why he wrote them, he said that "Alice asked me to."

Mrs. Rhinelander was told to go into the jury room, where before the jury and a lawyer from each side she bared the upper part of her body. She was crying as she was led to the room, and crying as she left it, but her ordeal seemed to convince some of those who were present that she was dark hued. It was one of the most extraordinary moments of this extraordinary case.

Expert Says High Winds Caused Shenandoah Wreck

Washington.—Terrific winds, rather than pressure or structural weakness caused the destruction of the airship Shenandoah.

This was the testimony of Charles P. Burgess, expert on airship construction, before the naval court of inquiry which is investigating the airship's destruction. Mr. Burgess stated that after careful calculations and a thorough study of the wreckage he was confident that gas pressure had nothing whatever to do with the ship breaking up.

Waterway to the Gulf in Next Five Years Urged

St. Louis.—A waterway opened from Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico within five years was the demand of the Mississippi Valley association as it convened its seventh annual convention.

The association, called on congress to spend $240,000,000 to open the deep waterway which would connect Chicago, St. Paul, Pittsburgh, Nashville, Minneapolis and Kansas City with New Orleans and the sea and called on all forces in the Mississippi valley to combine to bring about the deep waterway.

U. S. Men Destroy Wine Valued at Over $80,000

Bath, N. Y.—Federal and county authorities raided the White Top champagne cellars at Gibson's Landing, ten miles north of Hammondsport, destroyed 18,000 gallons of champagne, brandy and rare wines, valued at more than $80,000, and four 25-gallon stills.

Charles Wheeler, owner, was arraigned here later charged with operating the cellars without a license.

RIDING ON A RAILROAD TRAIN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

RIDING on a railroad train,
Through the sunshine, through the rain,
Has so much of pleasure in it,
Something lovely every minute!—
Always crossing little brooks,
Always passing shady nooks,
Shallows made for folks to wade in,
Meadows that the children played in,
Far-off forests, fences, fields,
Every moment something yields,
God's great sky forever o'er you,
All of earth spread out before you.

Riding on a railroad train
How can anyone complain,
Ever worry, ever weary,
Say it's long, or slow, or dreary,
With so many things to see:
Snowy fields or leafy tree?—
Passing mansion, cottage, dwelling,
Every house of something telling,
Stopping at some little town
Quaint and queer and tumble-down,
Touched a little with God's glory,
Just unwinding like a story.

Riding on a railroad train,
Through the mountain, o'er the plain,
Where you journey doesn't matter—
There is music in the clatter,
For you always find a friend
And a haven at the end.
So it is, and so our life is—
What the joy is, what the strife is,
Life is like a railroad train,
Bearing us through sun and rain
On some way that we have found us,
With God's beauty all around us.

YOUR Last Name

IS IT SCHAEFFER?

SCHAEFFER always appears to be a name of German origin, though most of those who bear it in this country now are 100 per cent Americans. The first of the name to come here was Alexander Schaeffer, a native of the Palatine. He went to England and then settled in this country in 1728.

Possibly the largest family of Schaeffers is descended from David Schaeffer, who came from Frankfort in 1776 and settled in Pennsylvania. He was a learned Hebrew and a stanch Lutheran. Charles Ashmead Schaeffer, a noted educator, was one of his descendants. George Schaeffer, a pioneer in Pennsylvania, is also to be mentioned, as is Nathan C. Schaeffer, well-known educator and writer.

MORRIS: There are many theories as to the origin of this name. It is sometimes said to be derived from the first name Maurice. Again it is claimed by one branch of the family that they are descended from Maur Rhys. The one who first bore this name was a companion of Richard de Clare, known as Strongbow. He took part in the Anglo-Norman conquest of Ireland in 1171. His name was Rgyrs at first, but as indication of his valor, he was subsequently known as Maur Rhys. The American branch of the family making this claim was founded here by Richard Morris, who arrived in New York in 1668. He purchased 2,000 acres of land in what is now the borough of the Bronx in New York.

A more usual and possibly more likely theory is that Morris has the meaning of Moor, and dates from the days when Christian Europe was at war with Moors and Saracens. It is quite likely that the one who first was given the name Morris took the part of a Moor in a pageant or ... ity play.

You can tell her by her cellar,

EAT MORE VEGETABLES

IF WE ate less rich food such as pies, puddings and meats and served daily a green salad, at at least two meals, the health of the family would be greatly benefited. Fresh fruit is another essential. Apples are plentiful and are in most places very reasonable in price.

Spinach may be had the year round—the canned variety is not as good as the fresh, but it has the advantage of being ready to serve.

Carrots should be served in various ways. Creamed, served in butter with lemon juice; fresh-grated and added to chopped cabbage and celery, we have a most wholesome salad; a few nuts may be added for a change; a bit of onion will also add variety in flavor.

Even-sized onions, roasted on coals and served with butter, are delicious. Fresh ones chopped, mixed with salad dressing and served as sandwich filling, make a nice Sunday night lunch, after church.

Baked beets, served with butter, are hard to equal as a vegetable. One can have canned corn, beans—string and otherwise—any time of the year, while celery, that delectable nutty vegetable, is nearly always in the market.

With the root vegetables which we can store in our cellars, and squashes with cabbage and onions, there need be no lack of variety.

Such green leaves as lettuce, chinese cabbage, and endive, with a bit of salad dressing, a salad is a quick dish to prepare.

Scalloped Onions.

Boil enough onions to serve the family. Make a white sauce using three tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, a few dashes of cayenne and white pepper. Cook until smooth, then add a pint of rich milk and boil five minutes. Pour this sauce over the onions which have been placed in a buttered baking dish, cover with buttered crumbs and bake until the crumbs are brown. Cheese may be added which will make a dish rich enough in food value to take the place of meat.

The patrons of a local show house were very much disturbed and annoyed by the continuous coughing of a person in the audience. Don't be a nuisance because you have a cough or cold. A few doses of FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND taken promptly will bring speedy relief from coughs, colds and hoarseness. Mrs. W. T. Clary White Plains, Va., writes: "We have used FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND for colds and bad cough, with splendid results."—Hite's Drug Store. adv.

Going to church is a habit with some people, others, have forgotten the way.

Boosting this town is all right, but it takes more than talk to make it grow.

Men may be the superior sex but a wise husband doesn't emphasize it to his wife.

Most people dislike those who they reluctantly admit to themselves are better than they are.

Swallows in Profusion

"Please keep the door closed to prevent swallows building inside the church," reads a notice posted on the church door in an English village.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Every community should support both morally and financially such an organization that means so much to our youth. FRANCE IS READY TO BALK FASCISTI RULE

Troops Prepared to March Into Paris to Prevent Coup d'Etat.

Paris.—While the government is holding troops in readiness near the capital to march into the city and stop any attempt at a coup d'etat, Paris newspapers are warning agitators and the people to remain calm and to remember that a revolutionary attempt such as that of the Fascisti and Mussolini in Italy cannot succeed.

Meanwhile Aristide Briand was attempting to form a ministry after that job had been given up by Senator Doumer and former Premier Herriot. M. Briand accepted the commission from President Doumergue reluctantly. He was asked to organize a government immediately after Painleve's fall, but after consideration reported he was unable to do so.

Extremist publications in Paris, both the far right and the far left, talk frankly of the possibility of an attempt at a fascist coup in France. More moderate newspapers warn against such an effort in more veiled terms.

The people are apathetic over the government crisis. They observe only that prices are slowly rising, a tendency which has been continuous since the war, and they are told by the newspapers that the franc is falling, but they observe little personal effect from the fall.

Girl and Two Men Admit Bombing Stores in Chicago

Chicago.—Origin of all of Chicago's recent bomb outrages was revealed, according to State's Attorney Crowe, when Fred N. Wanquist and his sweetheart broke down under a long grilling and confessed that they perpetrated five of the bombings.

Information was obtained to disclose a "bomb trust" that made a business of explosions at $200 each.

Wanquist and the woman, Mrs. Lena Rice, twenty-three, divorcee and mother of three, were caught by police after they had exploded a bomb at 3639 Fullerton avenue. Wanquist and another man, Jose Avanzio, were slightly wounded.

Mrs. Rice first gave her name as Lea McClellan, then as Lea McLullan, then as Lee McCullem. She is a daughter of H. C. Schrock, a prominent citizen of Richwood, Ohio. Her deserted husband is Archie L. Rice of Benton Harbor, Mich.

Maj. Gen. Patrick Declares His Plans Were Ignored

Washington.—In his annual report Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service declared that not one of his recommendations last year had so far resulted in tangible action.

The service should be increased to that recommended by the Lassiter committee, he said, and action should be taken to give the service the same status that the marine corps has in the navy. This recommendation has been opposed by the War department and the general staff.

Funds are needed, the report declared, to provide safe flying equipment for existing units and a separate budget is asked to take care of the needs of the air service.

U. S. TO BUY LIBERTY BONDS FROM HOLDERS

Treasury Tells of New Plan—Brokers Eliminated.

Washington.—The Treasury department will purchase from investors $50,000,000 or thereabouts of Third Liberty loan bonds at or below 101½ and accrued interest, it was announced by A. W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury.

Proposals for the sale of such bonds must be presented to the Federal Reserve banks by December 10 and payment will be made of December 29 for all bonds delivered in accordance with accepted proposals.

This is a departure in the redemption of Liberty bonds, the treasury heretofore having purchased for the cumulative sinking fund on the market or through brokers.

Now it is proposed to test the feasibility of making such purchases, in part, at least, directly from the holders of the bonds, and thus give all holders the opportunity to sell with the understanding that the lowest offers may be accepted. This procedure will save commission charges to the seller and to the treasury.

Dance Hats Revel in Metallic Splendor

From the appearance of our midwinter chapeaux, we are led to believe that the milliners surely must have found the promised pot of gold at the end of the rainbow trail. Glinting and gleaming with metallic splendor are the little gold-and-silver matinee and dance hats for the holiday season. Nor is this shimmering, scintillating beauty confined to the hat for festive occasion.

With our fur coats, or our fur-trimmed cloth coats (fashion glories in either), we are wearing most becoming headgear conjured of gilded leather embellished with stitchery and applique of most colorful mien.

The hat at the top of this group has its gorgeous metallic handiwork veiled with dusky brown malines. The center model is of silver and black velvet applique. A winged novelty of gold with silver is used on the attractive velvet and metal cloth shape shown last in this collection.

STICKING BY THE JOB

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE house in which I am living was built more than twenty-five years ago, and not badly built either, but as I go around it I can still find things that were not quite finished. There is a strip of molding in the bathroom that is only lightly tacked on; a shelf is missing from one of the closets; a nail is only half driven into the baseboard, or something is left just short of finishing. The whistle had blown for the noon hour, the clock had struck six, or for some reason or other the workman had been called away from the job, and he had forgotten that anything had been left incompleted. It would have been better if he had stuck by his job until it was finished.

"I'll come back in a few days," the painter who was painting the front porch, said two years ago, "and touch up the back steps a little. They need a second coat. Just now I must go over to the Sheldon house. They want to move in." I've never seen him since, and the paint is wearing very thin on the back steps.

The electrician who hung the lantern over our front door broke one of the strips of glass in doing so. He could easily repair it, he said; there was plenty of glass like it in his shop. He'd look after it next day. It has been hanging there for weeks and the job is not yet done.

Jacobs was gone this summer. He had not had a real vacation for ten years, so he took his wife and family and spent three months visiting the home of his ancestors across the ocean. They had a wonderful time, but Jacobs says he's never going away again until he retires from business.

"I haven't any doubt," he explained to me, "that when I stop they'll get someone to look after things quite as well, if not better than I do, but so long as I draw the salary, I suppose I'm expected to take the responsibility. As long as you have a job, it's better to stick to it. It'll take me three years to correct all the things that were bungled or neglected or done wrong while I was gallivanting about Europe. As long as a job's yours, you'd better look after it, I say."

The Tau Kappas started out with a fine group of men and with admirable enthusiasm. They had ideals, they showed energy, they did their work admirably; but that was at the beginning, as I said. They have been slumping lately; they are letting go at loose ends; they are not sticking by the job.

It takes persistence to stick by a job until it is finished, to see that all the nails are driven, and the tag ends tied up, and the last detail looked after. It's the way a man ought to want to do his work, whether it is a house he is building or a life.

Old Songs

The lyric for Annie Laurie was inspired by a beautiful woman of that name about 1700. An earlier familiar rhyme in song, however, was "Three Blind Mice," 1609, while "Sing a Song of Sixpence" is said to date back to the Sixteenth century. Others not so well known were written even earlier.

CHAPTER VIII

A Blow for Sammy

Malone changed the subject abruptly. "That's a great fish story they tell about the gypsy prophesying you'd be hung before you were thirty."

"If you will excuse me, Mr. Malone, I must be getting back to the house. It's nearly 7 o'clock and I am expecting people to dine with me," said Oliver a little coldly.

"I'm sorry I've detained you," said the detective apologetically. "I'll stroll back with you, if you don't mind."

"Where is your partner?" inquired Oliver, looking out over the swamp.

"Charlie? Oh, he'll be along directly. He is seeing about how long it would take a man to walk out to the edge of the mire and back," said Malone coolly.

Oliver looked at him sharply. "So that's the idea, eh?" he remarked, after a moment.

"We intend to conduct this investigation in an open and above-board manner, Mr. Baxter."

"And I shall be open and above-board with you, Mr. Malone," said Oliver, a trace of irony in his voice. "I hope, therefore, that you won't take it amiss if I suggest that the sensible thing for your man to do would be to make his calculations at night, when progress would naturally be a great deal slower and infinitely more hazardous."

"I've taken that into account," announced the detective, looking straight ahead. "I was about to say that it's going to take a good deal of tight squeezing, Mr. Baxter, to get you indicted, tried and executed inside of the next 30 days. The time is pretty short, eh?" He laughed jovially.

Oliver turned on him. "I'll knock your d—d head off, Malone, if you make any more cracks like that. Remember that, will you?" he cried hotly.

Malone was genuinely surprised. He went very red in the face.

"Yes," he said thickly, "I'll be sure to remember it."

Oliver apologized to Malone as they were on the point of separating in front of the house. They had traversed the hundred yards or more in silence.

"I am sorry I spoke to you as I did, Mr. Malone. I hope you will overlook it."

Malone held out his hand. "I've been spoken to a good bit rougher than that in my time, Mr. Baxter, and never curled a hair," he said good-naturedly. "I don't blame you for calling me down. I guess I was fresh. But I assure you I didn't mean to be."

A little later on Oliver sat on his front porch waiting for his guests to arrive. Mrs. Grimes, in her snug-fitting black silk dress, rocked impatiently in a chair nearby. The guests were late.

"It's Josephine Sage," she observed crossly, breaking a long silence. "She's the one that's making 'em late."

He looked at his watch. "It's only 7:30, Aunt Serepta. They're only 15 minutes late. I've been losing my temper again," he said gloomily. "Probably made an enemy of that detective, Malone."

"What difference does that make? He's not a voter in this county," said the old lady composedly. "Here they come. Goodness! The way that Parr boy drives! He ought to be locked up for—"

But Oliver was at the bottom of the steps waiting for the automobile. It swung around the curve in the drive and came to an unbelievably gentle stop.

"The best trained automobile in America," said Sammy, with his customary modesty. "Kindness is what does it."

"So sorry to be late," said Mrs. Sage, as Oliver ceremoniously handed her out of the car.

"What is that I hear, Oliver?" said the minister as he stepped out of the car. Jane and Mrs. Sammy had preceded him. "Is it true the detectives are here and expect to start this ridiculous search tomorrow?"

"They're here all right," replied Oliver. "One of them tried to sell you a set of Dickens the other day."

"What!" cried Jane, gripping Oliver's arm. "What, that man a detective?" She was startled.

"No less a person than Mr. Sherlock Hawkshaw Malone, the renowned sleuth," said Oliver, smiling.

"The beast—the beast!" she cried hotly. "Good heavens! That accounts for the interest he took in your father's disappearance."

"At any rate," said Mr. Sage, complacently, "he did not succeed in selling us a set of Dickens."

Jane started to say something, but, instead, abruptly turned away and joined the other women on the porch. A queer little chill as of misgiving stole over her.

"Hey, Oliver!" called out Sammy from down the drive where he was parking the car. "Come here a minute, will you? Say," he went on, lowering his voice as Oliver came up, "I've just picked up something rich. Fellow came in day before yesterday and showed me a volume of the 'Arabian Nights,' absolutely unexpurgated—"

"I know. And you fell for it, didn't you?"

"Sh! Not so loud. My wife doesn't know a thing about it. But say, who told you about it?"

Then Oliver told him. Sammy leaned against the mudguard and swore softly.

"Say, I wish I could remember what I said to the guy about—about your father. Lord, he had me talking a blue streak. Darn my fool eyes! You'd think I'd have sense enough to— Oh, well, go ahead and kick me, Ollie. Right here. Just as hard as you like."

"Come on. They're waiting for us. You needn't worry, old boy."

Sammy and Oliver entered the sitting room. Mrs. Sage was standing almost directly under the chandelier, talking to dumpy Mrs. Grimes; the light from above fell upon her auburn crown, flooded her magnificent shoulders and arms, and then wavered timidly, almost helplessly, as it first came in contact with resplendent opposition. The actress was a head taller than Mrs. Grimes, who nevertheless bravely stood her ground and faced comparison with all the hardihood of the righteous.

Mr. Sage, with a distinctly bewildered and somewhat embarrassed expression keeping company with the proud and doting smile that seemed to be stamped upon his lean visage, stood across the room with his daughter and Mrs. Sammy.

"Do you mean to tell me, Oliver, that those blighters intend to begin digging up your place tomorrow?" Josephine asked incredulously.

Oliver laughed. "I think we'll all rather enjoy the excitement, Aunt Josephine," he said. "I suppose they'll begin prying up the kitchen floor tomorrow, or digging trenches in the cellar, or tearing up the flower-beds."

She looked at him narrowly. "What utter rot! Do they expect to find your father buried in the cellar or under the kitchen floor?"

"They don't expect to find him at all," replied Oliver, with unintentional shortness.

He glanced over his shoulder at Jane. Their eyes met and their gaze held for some seconds. He detected the clouded, troubled look in hers and was suddenly conscious of what must have seemed to her a serious intensity in his own. He knew now that he was in love—that he always had been in love with Jane, that he always would be in love with her. He compressed his lips and fought against the strange, mad impulse to shout that he was in love with her, that she was his—all his—and that no man should take her away from him.

And she? She was thinking of that dry, hot night when he came to see her after leaving his father, out of breath, his shoes covered with fresh black mud. There had been no rain for weeks. The roads were thick with dust. And Lansing, too, had noticed that his shoes were muddy. He had spoken to her about them, he had wondered where Oliver had been to get into mud up to his shoe tops! And she, herself, had never ceased to wonder.

Oliver was strangely restless during dinner, and immediately after the company rose from the table at its conclusion he asked Jane to come with him for a little stroll in the open air.

"I want to speak to you about something," he urged. "Better throw something over your shoulders. The night air—"

"Ought you to go off and leave the others, Oliver?" she began, a queer little catch, as of alarm, in her voice. "Muriel and Sammy—"

"Come along," he pleaded. "They won't mind. I must [illegible] a few minutes. [illegible]

her wrap over her shoulders. "Are you cold?"

She did not reply. He followed her out upon the porch and down the steps. No word passed between them until they had turned the bend in the drive and were outside the radius of light shed from the windows. He was the first to speak.

"See here, Jane," he blurted out, "I'm—I'm terribly troubled and upset." That was as far as he got, speech seemed to fail him.

She laid her hand on his arm.

"Is it about—about the detective, Oliver?" she asked tremulously.

"No," he answered, almost roughly. "It's about you, Jane. You've just got to answer me. Are you going to be married?"

"Yes," she said, her voice so low he could scarcely hear the monosyllable.

They walked in silence for twenty paces or more, turning down the path that led to the swamp road.

"I—I was afraid so," he muttered. Then fiercely: "Who are you going to marry?"

She sighed. "I am going to marry the first man who asks me," she replied and, having cast the die, was instantly mistress of herself. "Have you any objections?" she asked, almost mockingly.

If he heard the question he paid no heed to it. She felt the muscles of his strong forearm grow taut, and she heard the quick intake of his breath. She waited. She began to hum a vagrant little air. It seemed an age to her before he spoke.

"Jane," he said gently and steadily, "if you were a man and in my place—I mean in my predicament—would you go so far as to ask the girl you love better than anything in all the world to marry you?"

"There couldn't be any harm in asking her. She could refuse you, you know."

"There's the gypsy's prophecy," he murmured thickly. "It—it may come true Jane."

"It—it cannot come true," she said. "It cannot, Oliver."

"Still it is something to be considered," he said heavily and judicially. His hand closed over hers and gripped it tightly. "If you were in my place wouldn't you hesitate about inviting her to—to become a widow?"

'Oh, I love you, Oliver, when your voice sounds as if it had a laugh in it," she whispered.

"In a month I will be thirty," he went on, his heart as light as air. "I might ask her to give me a thirty-day option, or something like that."

"You goose!"

He pressed her arm to his side, and was serious when he spoke again, after a moment's pause.

"I have never asked a girl to marry me, Jane. Never in all my life. Do you know why?"

She buried her face against his shoulder. A vast, overwhelming thrill raced through him. His arms went about her and drew her close.

"I never realized it, Jane—I never even thought of it till just a little while ago—but now I know that I have always loved you."

Her arm stole up about his neck, she raised her chin.

"I began calling myself your wife, Oliver, when I was a very little girl—when we first began playing house together, and you were my husband and the dolls were our children."

He kissed her rapturously. "Oh, my God!" he burst out. "You'll never know how miserable I have been these last few weeks—how horribly jealous I've been."

She stroked his cheek—possessively. "I haven't been very happy myself," she sighed. "I—I wasn't quite sure you would ever, ever ask me to be your wife."

"That reminds me," he cried boyishly. "Will you, marry me, Miss Sage?"

"Of course I will. Didn't I say I would marry the first—what was that?"

As she uttered the exclamation under her breath, she drew away from him quickly, looking over her shoulder at the thick, shadowy underbrush that lined the road below them.

"I didn't hear anything," said he, turning with her. "It must have been my heart trying to burst out of it—sh! Listen. There is someone over there in the brush. D—n his sneaking eyes, I'll—"

"Don't! Don't go down there!" she cried, clutching his arm. "You must not leave me alone. I'm—I'm afraid, Ollie. I am always afraid when I am near that awful swamp."

"Let's walk down the road a little way, Jane," said he stubbornly. "Don't be afraid. I'll stick close beside you."

"You won't go down into the swamp," she cried anxiously.

"No. Just along the road."

They ran down the little embankment into the road. After fifteen or twenty paces Oliver pressed her arm warningly and stopped to listen. Ahead of them, some distance away, they heard footfalls—the slow, regular tread of a man walking in the road.

They stood still listening. Suddenly the footfalls ceased.

"He knows we have stopped," said Oliver. "He's listening to see if we are following."

She was silent for a moment. "You remember what I said about being spied upon, Oliver. I feel it, I feel it all about me. You are being watched all th[illegible] Oh, how hateful.

the worst of it. My father is gone. I was, so far as anyone knows, the last to see him. As you say, no one may believe that I had anything to do with it, but—where is he? A queer thing has just happened. You know Peter Hines—that queer old bird who has always lived in the cabin at the lower end of the swamp? He has skipped out. Boarded up the door and windows and—"

He started violently, the words dying on his lips. Off to the south, beyond the almost impenetrable wall of night, gleamed far-off lights in the wall of Peter Hines' shack.

"He must have returned," he said, in an odd voice. "Those lights—"

"Let us go in, dear," she pleaded. "I—I hear something moving among the weeds down there. It's grisly, Oliver—creepy." Oliver yielded to her entreaties and they made their way back to the house.

Mrs. Sage was holding forth in her most effective English when the two entered the sitting-room. She may have eyed them narrowly for a second or two, but that was all.

Sammy Parr, however, who had been observing Oliver very closely, got up from his chair and marched across the room, his hand extended.

"Congratulations, old man!" he shouted joyously.

And little old Mrs. Grimes, from her place on the sofa, remarked, as she leaned back with a sigh of content:

"Well, goodness knows it's about time."

Proving that since the entrance of the lovers the great Josephine had failed to hold her audience spellbound

RESULTS THAT LAST!

Proven by East Jordan People.

Thousands of kidney sufferers have tried remedy after remedy with only temporary benefit. That's mighty discouraging! But one kidney remedy has earned a reputation for lasting results and there's plenty of proof right here in East Jordan.

Read the experience of one who used Doan's Pills years ago and now makes her endorsement even stronger.

Mrs. Henry Ribble, Bridge St., East Jordan, says: "I had a lameness in my back and when I stooped, knife-like pains took me across my kidneys. I felt nervous and depressed and headaches and dizzy spells were frequent, too. I saw Doan's Pills advertised and I used a few boxes from Gidley & Mac's Drug Store. They cured me." (Statement given April 23, 1920.)

On Oct. 11, 1924, Mrs. Ribble said: "The cure Doan's Pills made for me has stood the test of years. It is a pleasure to recommend them."

The Florida "Boom"

The Florida "boom" continues to mystify the residents of other states. The land of flowers has suddenly found itself the host of hundreds of thousands of people, and its land values jumping, in certain places, by huge percentages. Large fortunes have been made in land speculation.

The people of the north and middle west have just begun to realize that Florida and the gulf states have beautiful shorelines hundreds of miles further south than California and climate that is comparable. As a resort country these states equal anything in the United States. Heretofore the fine bathing beaches have been undeveloped but today there are hundreds of developments under way and, we guess, somemillions of lots for sale.

As long as outside capital pours into this territory land values will rise, especially in the centers of this development. Those who contemplate land purchases should have a knowledge of the states and exercise great prudence, or else they will find themselves owning useless lots without value. This has been recognized in Florida, itself, where an effort is being made to eliminate unscrupulous dealers in real estate.

Miami, Tampa, and other cities in Florida are enjoying a great "boom." Whether it will continue is impossible to say. There is a demand for lots as permanent investments, but thousands of them are being purchased for speculative purposes only. Together the two classes of purchases are creating great increases in values, always, however, with the reservation that this occurs in localities where developments are under way.

What this means is umknown because never before in this country has there been such a movement. A newspaper writer from New York says railroad officials have never seen such a rush to any state, that seven out of ten tickets are for Florida points. The rush is real, the feverish building activity is real, some of the big profits you hear about are real. More than this the first effort in the history of this country to plan and create huge cities in undeveloped territory is under way, and succeeding in many plaees.

There should be no envy of Florida, and the gulf states by other communities. Every section has its advantages and its opportunities to better itself. Let us use our talents and help ourselves, not by denouncing others, but by improving our heritage.

Two Views On Prohibition

National prohibition is the cause of many conflicting emotions. Men of great prominence differ widely as to its enforcement and beneficence. Last week two prominent Americans took opposite views in the great discussion. One of these was Dr. Hudson Maxim, inventor of the gun which bears his name and which has greatly increased the efficiency of man in the murder of his fellowmen. The other commentator on prohibition was Dr. William J. Mayo celebrated surgeon, whose skill has prolonged the life and eased the pain of thousands.

Dr. Maxim asserts that "drinking races have always dominated the earth and will always do so. This being the case enforcement of prohibition is a crime. The fact that it is a legal crime makes it no less one." Dr. Maxim going abroad for the first time in twenty-eight years took his parting shot at prohibition, saying that one of his objects in going abroad was to get something to drink. He declared, "We will have to invent a new human race if prohibition is to succeed. Human digestion is not so constituted that it can function under modern civilized conditions without the use of alcohol."

Dr. Mayo declared that "Prohibition as it now exists is only a process of educating the American people to the need of prohibition, and an experiment leading to the institution of established means of governmental control of intoxicating liquors." He says prohibition is "working toward an end, a good end, and therefore I cannot believe that it is a failure." He further refutes the idea of some by saying, "There are fewer cases of alcoholirm today than in pre-hrohibition days. Surgical cases coming into our hospital do not include as many instances of lowered resistance due to alcoholism as in former years. As to the use of whiskey and other alcoholic stimulants in medical practice, I can see no use. It is not necessary except in cases of alcoholism where [illegible]'s condition demands it. The English "Dole" System

Artnur Henderson, one of England's socialists, is lecturing throughout this country and upholding the dole system with the statement that it is a form of employment insurance and that the workers themselves subscribed three hundred million dollars to the fund. The fact that workers have put up money which they could ill afford with which to furnish doles to others does not justify the evil. The dole system encourages idleness and decreases productiveness. It is uneconomical, and in the end ruinous. England is being taxed to the limit to maintain a large number of men in idleness. There is no question that her trade is falling off; union domination of nearly everything and restriction of output has caused that and there is a bad social influence generally. In Italy the exact opposite exists. There are no idle people. There is no eight hour day, but both men and women work as long as they can secure proper compensation. Taxes are lower than in England and Italy is forging to the front affectively. The dole system was one of England's compromises which has had a disastrous result.

Power Machinery And Agriculture

The result of the application of power to agriculture is said to be responsible for the fact that while there are only 25 gainfully occupied people out of a hundred in the United States employed in agriculture as against 68 out of a hundred in 1850, each agricultural worker today cares for an average of at least 35 acres of crops compared with an individual average of 12 acres 75 yeara ago.

Pig Survey Wanted By U. S. Dept. Ag'l.

Since there is misunderstanding on the part of some farmers in this locality as to the usefulness of the information as to hog production and crop acreages obtained from the cards distributed by the rural mail carriers Postmaster Stroebel has requested the Herald to publish the following statement furnished him by the United States Department of agriculture.

These surveys are made with the help of the rural carriers, who either distribute the cards to a certain number of farmers along their routes, with the request that these be filled out, or the carrier fills out the card himself by interviewing the farmer. The carrier is instructed to get information from farms which will give a good average picture or sample of farms along a part of his route, big and little, good and poor, owned and rented.

If a fair sample of farms is returned in each State, figues for these farms should show the same change as all farms. It is impossible to take an actual census enumeration of all farms each year, so changes in production and acreage each year must be estimated from samples. The nearer these samples are to being exact, the more correct will be the estimates.

The need and value of such information for individual farmers and agriculture in general hardly need be stressed. Without dependable information as to actual production and trends of production both of livestock and crops more balanced production and better market distribution are impossile.

The Department of Agriculture is the qualified agency to undertake such work, but the accuracy of its estimates depends upon the accuracy of the returns made by farmers.

The beneficial effects that such information may have upon price is shown by the level of hog prices during the winter of 1924-25 compared to the previous winter. The pig survey of June and December 1924 showed a decided decrease in hog production in 1924 compared to 1923. Marketings, however, during the winter from the 1924 crop were almost as large as the previous winter, and in December and January were the highest on record. In spite of these heavy marketing, hog prices were from $2.00 to $3.00 per hundred higher than during the winter before. The heavy marketing were rightly interpreted as being an early marketing of a smaller number of hogs caused by a short corn crop and not as indicating a correspondingly larger number of hogs.

But unless these estimates can be kept dependable the trade will disregard them and will be guided either by private estimates or by actual marketings as these take place. Therefore, every farmer should help to make these [illegible] accurate by making the report [illegible] complete and accurate.

Railroad Capitalization

We take pleasure in quoting from a recent address on American Transportation by Samuel Rea, retired president of the Pennsylvania Railroad company:

"It is safe and conservative to say that there is no great form of industry or enterprise in the world which has been built upon a sounder financial basis, or which possesses greater fundamental strength and integricy in financial structure, than characterize our railroads. Should the solvency of these vast properties as a whole ever be threatened, the cause will not lie in any flaws or weakness, inherent in themselves, but rather in elements beyond the control of their managements, such for example, as a long continued abuse of the governmental power to encroachments on the duties and responsibilities of directors. Such disaster however I hasten to say has in my opionion no longer the slightest likelihood of occuring."
